Sake

JAPANESE SAKE

WARM

Sake, also spelled saké also referred to as a Japanese rice wine, is an alcoholic beverage made by fermenting rice that has been polished to remove the bran. Unlike wine, in which alcohol is produced by fermenting sugar that is naturally present in fruit, typically grapes, sake is produced by a brewing process more akin to that of beer, where starch is converted into sugars which ferment into alcohol.

One of the indicators of Sake would be its 'polishing ratio'. Rice polishing ratio, called 'Seimai-buai', measures the degree of rice polishing. For example, rice polishing ratio of 60% means that 60% of the original rice grain remains and 40% has been polished away. As a result, sake made with rice that has been highly milled is usually more expensive than a sake that has been made using less polished rice.
